1. Mike Hailwood's record-breaking win in 1961

Mike Hailwood is one of the most iconic names in TT history. In 1961, he broke the lap record on the Mountain Course by an incredible 10 seconds, averaging over 100 mph. He went on to win the Senior TT race, setting a new race record in the process. Hailwood's victory was a landmark moment in TT history, and his lap record stood for over 10 years.

2. Giacomo Agostini's 10th TT win in 1968

Giacomo Agostini winning his 10th TT race in 1968

Giacomo Agostini is another legendary TT rider. He won the Senior TT race a record 10 times, including five consecutive victories from 1966 to 1970. Agostini's victory in 1968 was particularly special, as it was his 10th TT win. He is the only rider to have won the TT 10 times, and his record is unlikely to ever be broken.

3. Joey Dunlop's emotional victory in 1989

Joey Dunlop is one of the most popular riders in TT history. He won the TT 26 times, including four consecutive victories from 1984 to 1987. Dunlop's victory in 1989 was particularly emotional, as it came just two weeks after the death of his brother, Robert, in a racing accident. Dunlop rode with a heavy heart, but he was determined to win for his brother. He did just that, taking the victory in the Senior TT race.

4. David Jefferies' tragic accident in 2003

David Jefferies was a rising star in TT racing. In 2003, he was leading the Senior TT race when he crashed at the Verandah. Jefferies died from his injuries, leaving the TT community in shock. Jefferies was a talented rider with a bright future, and his death was a tragic loss for the sport.

5. Ian Hutchinson's incredible comeback in 2010

Ian Hutchinson is one of the most successful TT riders in recent years. In 2010, he suffered a horrific crash at the TT, which left him with life-changing injuries. Hutchinson underwent multiple surgeries and spent months in hospital. However, he refused to give up on his racing career. In 2014, he made an incredible comeback to the TT, winning the Senior TT race. Hutchinson's story is an inspiration to everyone, and his victory in 2010 is one of the greatest moments in TT history.

The Isle of Man TT Races have produced some of the most iconic moments in motorsport history. From daring feats of engineering to awe-inspiring victories, the TT has witnessed some truly unforgettable moments. The riders who have raced at the TT are some of the bravest and most skilled in the world, and their stories are an inspiration to us all.
